Better Carburetors As Offset High Cost Of Gas Proposed

PARIS, Aug. 2.—(Associated Press Mail)—Gasoline consumption for automobiles is such a serious question here, with gas costing from 55 to 60 cents a gallon, that recent French tests to develop better carburetion are being continued.

Cars smaller and lighter than those generally used in the United States, recently have averaged about 60 miles to the gallon of gasoline in official public contests. The winner in the principal competition of this sort made 61 miles to the gallon.

Large cars, weighing more than 4,000 pounds, averaged close to 16 miles to the gallon in the recent Strasbourg race of 440 miles over the Grand Prix course and under the same regulations. This was the first race of this kind organized by the Grand Prix officials, and it proved such a success that a similar contest is announced for next year.

These results, however, were under the special conditions that govern all such affairs and admittedly are not attainable by the average driver, particularly in the United States.

Several cars of a popular American make competed in the LeMans test for light cars, and their showing illustrates the progress made in economizing fuel. Equipped with the same carburetor as the winner that made 61 miles an hour, one ran 39 miles on a gallon and another made only 35 miles.

These economy tests, according to carburetor manufacturers, taught them lessons that will show next year in improved design, but so far there has been no revolution in engineering that is applicable to automobiles in general.

Racing tests, however, give a misleading idea of results, for the cars that then average 29 miles to the gallon operate normally at about 35 miles to the gallon. The difference is explained as due to six factors: the use of a special gasoline; equipment with the best carburetor; carburetor adjustment to get a weak mixture that would not serve in ordinary driving; expert driving; perfect mechanical condition of the car and special adjustment of the motor for high compression, and pronounced advance of the spark.

The reasons for the better results obtained by French cars over their American competitors are attributed to several things. The American cars were heavier, and it was mathematically certain that it would take more fuel to drive the greater weight. Particularly as the American cars traveled 20 percent faster. The American cars also stood higher from the ground and met greater wind resistance, also the American cars had much larger motors which turned over at a much slower speed, so that greater consumption was inevitable.

When the different conditions to be met by the French and the American manufacturer are considered, experts do not generally feel that there is any remarkable superiority in the French car. These differences grow out of costs of operation and the temperament of the public. Gasoline costs nearly twice as much in France as in the United States, and French makers, therefore, find it profitable to spend more money to produce an economical motor. This is done in several ways, but principally by having a well-finished, small motor, with relatively high compression, turning over at a high speed. Some small motors make 4,000 revolutions per minute, and French racing cars approach 5,000 R.P.M. The French are educated to look more to gasoline consumption than to speed and acceleration. They prefer a small motor with four speeds, and they are content to shift gears constantly so as to save gasoline.

Americans over here sometimes wonder whether the higher original cost of French cars really offsets the saving in gasoline. French cars corresponding in size, power, appearance and ability to travel cost much more than their American rivals. American quantity production accounts for much difference in price, although Citroen, called the "Ford of France," by far the numerical leader among cars, still suffers greatly when compared with American cars in price.

Foreign Interests Predominate Cuba

HAVANA, Cuba. — (Associated Press Mail)—Economic readjustment of governmental services resulting from the inauguration July 1 of the 1922-1923 budget of approximately $55,000,000 and causing the dismissal of thousands of federal employees, struck a heavy blow at the only remaining stronghold left to Cuban citizens—the government service. According to Jorge Roa, in the Diario De La Marina, the only thing Cuban in Cuba is the state, and he claims statistical backing for the following statements: railways and streetcar systems are under Anglo-American control; public lighting, American; city property 60 percent owned or pledged to foreign interests as security for loans; rural property 66 percent American; sugar interests, 56 percent American controlled and 44 percent other foreign control; tobacco, 70 percent Anglo-American; mining, Anglo-American; banking 75 percent foreign, shipping, foreign.

With Spaniards doing almost 100 percent of the retail business of the island and foreign interests dominating importing and wholesaling operations, Cubans have been forced into minor positions in every line except law, medicine and official, posts in which Cuban citizens alone are eligible.

So enjoyable was it that all of the 50 guests stood on through the entire afternoon and the guest of honor remained for half an hour longer than she had said she could make her stay when consulted as to arrangements.

For Mme. Miura's reception the house had been made a bower of the Outdoor Circle club flower, the kakei-alohe. In the receiving line with Mrs. Walker and Mme. Miura and her accompanist, Maestro Franchetti, were Mrs. W. J. Moir and Mrs. G. L. Keeney assisting in the introductions.

During the afternoon there were delightfully rendered musical selections, vocal rendered by Mrs. P. H. Cooley, piano by Miss Lucy Seong and Hawaiian numbers by Mrs. Freudenberg and the Kamehameha singers who were to give a concert in Lahaina that night came and serenaded the party. In the course of the afternoon Japanese refreshments were served as also were punch, cake and tea.

Throughout the whole affair there was an air of informality and homeliness that made the afternoon one full of enjoyment.

Some unique, very beautiful and amusing costumes displayed and many were the guesses as to "who was who" until masks were removed.

One of the novel features of the evening was a radio concert broadcast from Honolulu.

Music for dancing was furnished by the Molokai Hawaiian Glee Club. Delicious refreshments were furnished throughout the evening and every one had a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

Clergymen Practice Birth Control Now

LONDON, Aug. 12.—(Associated Press Mail)—Clergymen no longer have large families, the members of the Neo-Malthusian Birth Control Society were told by Professor MacBride at a recent conference. Thirty years ago the clergy were reckoned among the most prolific members of the community, and rightly regarded as breeders of talent; but today road sweepers, dock laborers and people of that class indulge in large families, while clerical families consist of only one or two children.

The Professor declared also that every species of animal and plant, if allowed to exercise unchecked its natural powers of reproduction, would in a few years completely overrun the earth and crush out other forms of life.
